TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE.

The Water Supply Comes Up for Discussion.

At the meeting of the Township Committee held on Monday afternoon the Road Committee reported the request of citizens for the opening of Mechanic Street, from Glenwood Avenue to Washington Street, along the west side of the Del. Lack and Western Railroad. It is claimed that this street, though never opened, was regularly laid by the surveyors of the highways some years ago, and that its opening would now be a great convenience to the public.

A motion was made and adopted that the matter of opening Mechanic Street be referred to Town Counsel Barrett for an opinion as to the rights of the public.

The Water Committee reported in favor of renewing the contract for a water supply with the Orange Water Company for another term of ten years at the price of $30 per hydrant per year. The price for the past ten years has been $60.

The question of a water supply was then discussed in its various bearings. The points brought out in the discussion were quite generally unfavorable to a renewal of the contract. It was conceded that while the quality of the water was better than might be obtained elsewhere the service was inadequate through lack of pressure. It was maintained that the Orange Water Company had not fulfilled the conditions of the contract in this respect, and could not possibly do so in the future. They could not supply the Glen Ridge section of the town in a manner satisfactory to the inhabitants and the repeated instances of lack of pressure sufficient for fire purposes were referred to. While this might be remedied somewhat by having the water works in East Orange connected with the Bloomfield fire alarm system, so that instant notice of a fire might be given and the required pressure applied, it was still thought that in most of the streets of Bloomfield the pipes that had been laid were not of sufficient size to supply what would be required in the future.

It was stated that the Company had laid 34 miles of pipes in the township, and that the Company was ready to sell the same for $120,000.

The plan of the township purchasing the pipes as laid, or laying others of larger size where needed, and buying water of the East Jersey Water Company was considered. It was stated that the company last named offered to furnish water at the rate of $100 per million gallons. It is estimated by the Orange Water Company that Bloomfield now uses 250,000 gallons daily.

No definite action was taken, and the further consideration of the water contract was laid over until the next meeting.

The ordinance relating to the contract with the city of Orange for the construction of the outlet sewer was read, the ordinance passed and ordered published.

The Fire Committee reported in favor of procuring 107 firemen's badges at $60 per 100, which was ordered by the Committee.

The application for active membership in the Fire Department of E. L. Stevens was approved. The sum of $15 was appropriated for firing salute on Washington's Birthday.

Temperance Meeting of Baptist Christian Endeavorers.

DO PEOPLE DRINK BECAUSE THEY ARE POOR?

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Baptist Church, Bloomfield, held a temperance meeting in the Sunday School room on Monday night. Rev. C. A. Cook, pastor of the church, presided. The meeting was opened with prayer and reading of scriptures. After the Christian Endeavor choir had sung, Mr. Cook introduced Mr. Hamilton, president of the Essex County Christian Endeavor Society, who made a few remarks. He was followed by Rev. F. C. Jones, pastor of the Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church, Newark, who spoke on the subject of temperance. He said that while a great stride had been made in temperance sentiment, yet drink was on the increase in this country. That one of the causes of intemperance, in fact the chief cause of it was the saloons, because they were in the business for revenue only, just the same as the butchers, the grocers and the bakers. They were in it to make money.

The saloon is a money-making concern, and the first thing to do was to strike at the revenue and destroy the profits of the business. Another cause was poverty and riches, two quite important factors. He said that where one person is made poor by drink, there are twenty who drink because they are poor. That with the poorly fed laborer, who required some stimulus, he drank beer because it came cheaper to him than bread, getting a glass of beer for five cents, and thinking that if a little was good more was better, he took more beer, and so poverty was one of the great causes of intemperance.

Inherited wealth, he claimed, was another cause which led to extravagant living, and the giving of champagne suppers, and time spent in carousals, by people not only moving in good society but who were members of churches. He said that associations led people down and influenced them to drink, just as other people by their associations were naturally led to espouse the cause of temperance. He alluded to political clubs being formed and as he knew from personal observation, met in a room behind a saloon and the barrel of beer was rolled in. That members of the church and Sunday School be longing to the club partook of the general festivities. It was his belief that men should bring religion into politics and into their business and in doing that a step would be taken in the right direction.

In illustration of the points made, he drew largely upon his own experience in Newark and in Troy, N. Y., where he had also been engaged in temperance work.

Lieutenant Peary's Lecture.

AN INTERESTING STORY AND DESCRIPTION OF ARCTIC EXPEDITIONS.

Lieutenant Peary gave his lecture on the Arctic Regions before a delighted audience in Montclair Club Hall last Saturday night. The touch of Arctic weather which had been so generously bestowed upon this region gave additional zest to the occasion and made the audience more ready to appreciate the story as told by this Arctic explorer, who will use the funds gained by his lectures to fit out another expedition.

Lieutenant Peary gave a graphic description of the dangers and privations of the Arctic Regions before a delighted audience in Montclair Club Hall last Saturday night. The touch of Arctic weather which had been so generously bestowed upon this region gave additional zest to the occasion and made the audience more ready to appreciate the story as told by this Arctic explorer, who will use the funds gained by his lectures to fit out another expedition.

The points in the lecture were no less a tribute to the endurance of the inhabitants of the icy regions of the north than they were to the skill and perseverance of the great explorer who has done what all others failed to accomplish, in making an overland journey to the highest latitude yet attained by civilized man.

While we have been discussing in a general way the referendum, the new Gladstone administration proposes to introduce the practice of the Swiss confederation into Ireland. When the upper and lower houses of legislature in Ireland disagree, the question will be referred to the people for settlement. There is a growing feeling in favor of the referendum in this country, as the adoption would be an estoppel against the many nefarious bills which find their way through our legislatures.

Washington's Birthday, &c.

A DAY TO BE REMEMBERED.

While the oldest inhabitant of Bloomfield cannot go back in memory to the days of Washington, there are very few residents here to day who will not remember February 22, 1893, for many years to come. So far as the Township government was concerned or in fact any considerable number of citizens, no preparations had been made for the celebrating of the day. So far as it had been thought of, it was looked forward to as a rest from labor, with perhaps a run to Newark or New York to attend the theatres.

The Clerk of the Weather however had been contemplating the matter, and had quietly worked up a scheme which will make the day live long in the hearts of the city-bred man and the countryman as well.

People had been basking in the sun and saying that the lack of winter was broken, and plans for the spring garden flitted through their heads, but the sky became overcast and a penetrating chilliness was in the air before the sun went to rest on Tuesday—and ere the bell had tolled 9 P. M. a fierce snow-storm had enveloped the town. Swift it fell all night, and then came rain and then sleet, which was succeeded by hail. By way of aggravation Old Sol pecked his head out in the forenoon to see if the Essex Hook and Ladder Company were evolving with the ladders. Then out of the north-west came the wind, bringing with it battalion after battalion of snow flakes that had made a mistake and gone too far west. The wind rose in all its majesty and force, tossing the snow with accuracy into the faces of the people and hustling everybody around recklessly.

It was as cold and as disagreeable a day as the inhabitants of Bloomfield have seen for many years.

The firing of the accustomed salute by the Bloomfield Battery was only a minor event as compared with the efforts of the weather to fix the day in the minds of the people. It was a day that made people look down instead of up, and so there were not many who knew whether the flag was flying or not, and a less number cared.

The Calico Hop at Excelsior House.

The event to which the friends of Excelsior House Company had been looking forward to with so much pleasure took place on Tuesday night. It is to be noticed that the people of the Second Ward generally plan their festive occasions so that they precede a holiday. There is wisdom in this as a course as in making a long-time contract with the musicians they obtained a reduced rate. Then again they can "make a night of it" and have the next day for rest.

The entertainment commenced early in the evening and was kept up until everyone present was sure that daylight had appeared.

The hop had been arranged by the wives of the members of the Company. The most active among these were Mrs. Wm. R. Rawson, Mrs. Fred Floris, Mrs. Joe B. Rawson, Mrs. Peter Wade, Mrs. J. Molague, Mrs. Emil Ramach, Mrs. George Lohr, and Miss Harriet Walker. The ladies were assisted by Wm. R. Rawson, Fred Floris and Jno. Rawson. James Bailey was the floor manager. Music was furnished by Professor Jackson's Columbian Orchestra.

About sixty people were present and the harder it snowed and blew outside the higher went the spirits of those within the chery and warm home house. The hose orchestra had been rolled down to Miller's wheelwright shop, so that the lower floor was used for dancing, and the rooms up stairs for cloak and dressing rooms, while two long tables had been set in the parlor.

Not all the ladies appeared in "sailors," as many bright and pretty dresses were worn. Each lady had however made her own little match between the dress or some part of its trimming. These neckties were sealed up in envelopes and the most amusing contest was afforded in finding the match for a necktie, which when found, a march was taken up for the supper room upstairs, the gentlemen escorting the lady whose colors he wore. The ladies had prepared a bountiful and elaborate repast to which full justice was done.

Among those present we noticed were: Mr. and Mrs. Vanderhoof, Mr. Purdy and wife of East Orange, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fornoff, Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey, Miss Maggie Greener of New York, Miss Kate Flanagan, Miss Emma Deable, Miss Anna Courter, Mr. Frank Gals, Jr., Mr. Thos. Monaghan, Mr. John Sutcliffe, Miss Amelia Mertz, Mr. Thos. Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leyland, Miss Jeanie Luberg and Mrs. Hogle of Newark, and Miss Schaub of Bloomfield.

Charles M. Davis has been notified by the United States Commissioner of Education that he has been appointed honorary vice-president from New Jersey for the department congress of school superintendents of the World's Fair. Bayonne should and does feel proud of Mr. Davis.

The High School Sociable.

Notwithstanding the severity of the storm on Friday evening, about thirty of the members of the High School Association were permitted to attend the reunion at Miss Russell's house.

A stage conveyed the members living near the Center. A book sociable had been planned for the evening's entertainment, and all were requested to display some representation of any well known book. The result was extremely amusing and if the symbols selected were all home made the High School Association should receive a credit mark for originality. Dr. Wm. Bronington had substituted dice for cards and a photograph of Miss Draper, in which the scholars recognized our Mutual Friend. Miss Jennie Morris had taken a pink ribbon around her neck, on which was written, March 16th, this was "Middlemarch." Miss Beattie Sutherland contrived to represent Pickwick Papers, with a toothpick, a lamp with a sprig of well known flowers in Miss Hattie Jones' hair proved her to be Under the Lilacs. Miss Sule Taylor and Miss Mollie Crawford in cap and gown were conspicuous as Two College Girls. Miss Bertha Russell had selected a full blown rose as a fitting symbol of Miss Alcott's Rose in Bloom. No doubt the selections by others of the company were equally as good as the foregoing but these are the outlet ones that found their way to the Record. A guessing game followed the guessing of the titles and their refreshments.

The Pleasure Club Feasts.

The Pleasure Club is composed of gentlemen ever on the alert for that which is palatable and of such exquisite delicacy as to make a feast to expel before the gods.

Mr. Courter, the genial host of the American House, having discovered that which would tickle the palates of these connoisseurs invited them recently to a toothsome repast, which was an opulent supper of the Placidus order.

As these gentlemen and their guests gathered around the festive board, the president, Arthur Leuthausser, arose to his feet and in a dissertation that was as profound as it was funny, explained the happy occasion which had brought them together. While he disclaimed the intention of being at all personal in his remarks, he recommended all to eat heartily of that which was set before them as being food which more than any other, not only supplied the wastes of the brain, but gave instances where it had supplied brains as well as repaired them.

He was happy in his remarks and was greeted with well merited applause.

Alfred Gilbert, when called upon, had partaken of the feast of which phosphorus was such an important ingredient and his speech indicated by its sparkling brightness how good can be gotten from a supper made of catfish.

Town Clerk Johnson, naturally reticent, also responded readily when called upon to utter speech.

Chas. Johnson, who is known as the "Golden Man" of the Essex Hook and Ladder Company, (because of his motto "Speech is silver and silence is golden") was on this occasion inclined to be loquacious.

Frank Unanget was as the sailors say, taken all to sea, and begged to be excused while he took a little more fish.

Fish stories abounded having been launched as it were by Clerk Bedford giving his fishing experience upon the St. John's river, Florida. Truth which is always more wonderful than fiction, was so eloquently portrayed by the Clerk that others drew upon their imaginations to outdo him. Having exhausted their stock of fiction, plans were discussed for building a house on a plot at Greenwood Lake, which has generously been placed at the disposal of the club by one of its members.

Subscriptions for stock were received and it is expected to have the house ready for occupancy this summer.

THE IDES OF MARCH.

SHADOWS OF THE APPROACHING ADMINISTRATION AT WASHINGTON.

How Mr. Cleveland Came to Select Gresham for the Cabinet—Why Judge Scholfield Refused a Place on the Supreme Bench.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—We are within 10 days of the inauguration, and of course we find little to talk about but the men who are to compose the new administration and what the new administration may be expected to do. Without any question the most sensational cabinet appointment made by Mr. Cleveland was that of Judge Gresham to be secretary of state. As I said in my last letter, Mr. Cleveland probably is the only president who has had for many years, probably the only one since Jackson, who has courage enough to do a thing like this. For two weeks the press of the country has been full of discussion of the wisdom of this appointment.

It would not be telling the precise truth to say that the nomination of Gresham was received with unqualified pleasure by the old time Democrats here. The fact is that they like it a bit. The opinions they expressed in private were naturally much more lurid and picturesque than the expressions they gave for public use. Here is what one good old fellow told me: "There is one consolation about this selection of Gresham," he muttered, "and that is that Gresham is a good fellow. He is a Democrat and he will remember I then said that he was a Democrat. But the next day the old senator was feeling better over it and wanted to forget that he had been so savage the night before. By this time nearly all the old Democrats who at first were angry to be very angry about the appointment and to 'let go' in their opinions concerning it are feeling much better, thank you, and smiling at their own anger."

What the old time Democrats like less than anything else about the Gresham appointment is the unmistakable indication it gives of the fact that Mr. Cleveland proposes to have a lot of fun during the next four years doing just about as he pleases. If you do me the honor to read my letters every week and read one which I wrote just after election last fall, you will remember I then said that I was going to wit, Mr. Cleveland was going to be president this time in his own sweet way and make up for the time he had spent trying to please other people in his former administration. You see, I was right about that, even if I was wrong about some other things.

When we have some high old times in the future, I think it is safe to say that it is sure. Mr. Cleveland is going to be a picturesque and interesting president, and we poor newspaper men will be kept busy running our legs off trying to get at the truth all the while and the more of wars and bickerings and conspiracies which affect the administration. You readers, whether Republicans or Democrats, are going to get the worth of the money you pay for newspapers during the next four years. But whether Republicans or Democrats or Populists my advice to you is not to get excited about the situation. Mr. Cleveland and his cabinet will have their quarrels, and great Democrats will cry out against the administration, and you may be induced to fear the government is coming to an end and everything going to the devil. But they won't. From now on, returning as quickly as it departed, and the government at Washington will continue to live.

This Gresham cabinet is quietly down already. So is the storm of criticism that was raised by the selection of Boker-Smith for secretary of the interior. In both cases the critics are discovering, in fact, that it doesn't make much difference what they say—Mr. Cleveland goes right along as if nothing had happened. And they are discovering, in the second place, that both Gresham and Smith are good, strong men. It has been one of the peculiarities of the unpleasant talk about Judge Gresham's selection for secretary of state that it will have their quarrels, and great Democrats will cry out against the administration, and you may be induced to fear the government is coming to an end and everything going to the devil. But they won't. From now on, returning as quickly as it departed, and the government at Washington will continue to live.

There is no lack of confidence anywhere in the ability and high character of Judge Gresham certainly is a remarkable man. He is like a woman in some ways. He fascinates men on first acquaintance. He does it, too, without any effort on his part, without a thought in the world of being anything but what he is and of giving close attention to the business in hand. But he has a voice which it is a delight to hear, eyes which have a way of looking into yours, and a deliberate, cautious way of speaking without being slow at all that is very alluring. When he talks to a man he likes, he is fond of sitting very near him and of looking him straight in the eye. Though as simple as any old farmer, Judge Gresham has an instinctive courtesy, and a never failing courtesy, which attracts men to him at the very outset. I have heard scores of men say, after a first meeting with Judge Gresham, that he had completely won their hearts, and the best of it is that when a man is once caught within the web which this fine American throws about all who come in contact with him the spell is rarely broken, for he is a man who wears and who sticks to his friends.

Mr. Cleveland must have been impressed in the same manner when he first met Judge Gresham. That was about a month ago. It was in Mr. Cleveland's New York house, which many of Mr. Cleveland's most confidential advisers that within half an hour after Gresham had gone away Mr. Cleveland said, "There is a man I'd like to have in my cabinet." And now you can tell me another thing that Mr. Cleveland said that day. It was Judge Gresham. The president elect had asked his caller's advice about asking into his cabinet a certain man who had not been in the Democratic party. "He's a good man," said Judge Gresham, "but I don't see that you can take into your official family a man who has recently joined your party." Though not intended, this remark cut close to the very
